- Self-awareness and mastery of skills to lead effectively.
- Establish goals, a plan to achieve them, and accessing progress along the way.
- Identify blind spots and areas of improvement.
- Identify and prioritize your activities and accountability without prejudice.
- Improve planning and decision making with confidence.

- Assess your true working genius and frustrations.

My approach.

Engaging a leader, given their demands and schedule, requires deliberate focus to create value quickly. Given the fact that each leader has different experiences and tenure, engagement cannot be prescriptive. A 'one-size-fits-all' approach is simplistic and ineffective, because it ignores the leader's behavioral pattern that controls how the skill that's going to be improved is executed. Thus, each leader will receive unique attention specific to their development needs and desires. The onboarding process is designed to flush out a preliminary path that makes best business sense at the time of engagement. A combination of non-directive and directive coaching will be utilized to maximize your leadership development.
